Box bed keeps children safe

A 'box bed' designed to ensure the safety of children with complex needs – especially those with seizures – has been bought with £4,975 of charitable funds. This bed is safer than a hospital cot or bed, with different height adjustments, thereby reducing the risk of patient falls and placing less strain on the carer.

Diagnosing heart conditions in pregnancy

Transthoracic echocardiography is a rapid, non-invasive way of gaining crucial information about the heart. £5,000 of charitable funds has enable the Rosie Hospital to provide this service at the bedside by providing additional technology for an existing ultrasound machine. Over 200 women with an obstetric critical illness will benefit from this new equipment each year.

Transferring patients for scanning with ease

Five specialist 'roll boards' have been bought by the neuro critical care unit with £1775 of charitable funds to aid with transferring patients from beds to CT and MRI scan tables. The lightweight 'no lift' roll boards are safe and comfortable for patients and prevent back injuries in staff, helping to make the process of transferring patients smoother and more effective.
